PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

Plaintiffs' Opposition ignores the deficiencies in their allegations related to the CB Defendants.¹ The CB Defendants highlighted many of these failures in their reply in support of their motion to dismiss the SAC in the Fleites action. Yet despite extensively citing the Fleites action in their Opposition, Plaintiffs make no effort to address the defects in their allegations that plague all of their claims against the CB Defendants.

Plaintiffs instead ask the Court to infer that merely advancing loans, [REDACTED], amounts to knowledge of, intent to further, control over, and agreement to benefit from a child sex-trafficking venture. Unreasonable inferences like these should not prevent dismissal. See Wilson v. Hewlett-Packard Co., 668 F.3d 1136, 1144 n.4 (9th Cir. 2012) (courts need not "accept as true allegations that are merely conclusory, unwarranted deductions of fact, or unreasonable inferences") (citation omitted). None of the cases cited in Plaintiffs' Opposition supports the existence of a claim against an arm's-length lender like the CB Defendants.

The Opposition also does not contradict the additional reasons that the Complaints' claims against the CB Defendants fail.

First, no claim is fairly traceable to or caused by the CB Defendants, which participated in two loans to the MindGeek Borrowers in 2011 and 2013 that concluded in 2018—before, as Plaintiffs allege, CSAM on Pornhub and similar websites gained significant attention. The CB Defendants are not alleged to have engaged in trafficking activity, received any direct benefits from trafficking activity, or to have known or had any contact whatsoever with Plaintiffs or their traffickers.

Second, to support a claim for beneficiary liability under the TVPRA, Plaintiffs ¹ The CB Defendants' unredacted omnibus motion to dismiss, including memorandum of points and authorities, is ECF No. 74-1 ("Motion" or "Mot. Mem."), and Plaintiffs' unredacted omnibus opposition to the Motion and motions to dismiss filed by other Defendants is ECF No. 96-1 ("Opposition" or "Opp'n"). Defined terms have the same meaning as stated in the Motion.

1 cite cases involving defendants with substantially greater and specific knowledge of,
2 contact with, and participation in actual sex-trafficking ventures with actual sex 3 traffickers. Plaintiffs also ignore that Judge Carney has already ruled on these issues in 4 Fleites, finding that, even as against Visa—which Judge Carney held, based on specific 5 allegations related to its conduct, knowingly provided the payment-services tool to 6 allow MindGeek to profit from CSAM—the plaintiff failed to state a beneficiary 7 liability claim.

8 Third, the Opposition does not overcome the binding Ninth Circuit authority in 9 Ratha II that forecloses Plaintiffs’ TVPRA conspiracy claims. Those claims, and 10 Plaintiffs’ civil conspiracy claims, also fail because Plaintiffs do not plead a conspiracy 11 involving the CB Defendants. Plaintiffs instead ask the Court to infer, based on 12 unsupported and conclusory allegations, that the CB Defendants intended and agreed 13 with MindGeek to monetize CSAM, even though the plain language of the Loan 14 Agreements—the only actual agreement before the Court—negates such inference.

15 Fourth, the Opposition ignores, or does not meaningfully address, the flaws that 16 doom the California claims (UCL, FAL, and IIED) against the CB Defendants.

17 Fifth, the applicable statutes of limitations bar all California claims (conspiracy, 18 UCL, FAL, and IIED) against the CB Defendants. Plaintiffs do not dispute that the 19 statutes of limitations for the California claims are four or fewer years and that Plaintiffs 20 did not file their claims until over five years after the CB Defendants ceased all loans 21 to the MindGeek Borrowers.

22 Sixth, Section 230 must provide immunity for all claims against the CB 23 Defendants if it immunizes MindGeek.

24 Plaintiffs do not contend that they can fix the defects in their claims against the 25 CB Defendants by amending their Complaints. Rather, Plaintiffs ask to take discovery 26 to salvage their claims. Opp’n 2:23-24, 20:9-10, 22:8-9, 23:28 n.15, 67:20-23. That is 27 not how Rule 8 works. See, e.g., Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678-79 (2009) (“Rule 28 8 . . . does not unlock the doors of discovery for a plaintiff armed with nothing more

1 than conclusions.”). The Court should dismiss Plaintiffs’ claims against the CB 2 Defendants with prejudice.

3 ARGUMENT

4 I. Plaintiffs Cannot Escape the Lack of Standing and Causation for Their 5 Claims Against the CB Defendants

6 The Opposition fails to refute that Plaintiffs lack standing under Article III to 7 assert claims against the CB Defendants and that the CB Defendants did not cause 8 Plaintiffs’ alleged injuries. See Mot. Mem. 11:23-15:14, 37:16-40:1. Both of these 9 reasons are independently fatal to all of Plaintiffs’ claims against the CB Defendants.

10 Plaintiffs generally cite to and incorporate by reference arguments made in the 11 Fleites plaintiff’s omnibus opposition to the defendants’ motions to dismiss. Opp’n, 12 63:25-28 n.49, 67:6-7. As to those arguments, the CB Defendants incorporate by 13 reference their reply in support of their motion to dismiss the SAC in Fleites (Case No.
14 21-cv-4920-WLH-ADS, ECF No. 505-1 (“Fleites Reply” or “Fleites MTD Reply”) § I, 15 2:20-4:17). The other arguments in the Opposition similarly fail to overcome Plaintiffs’ 16 lack of standing and causation for their claims against the CB Defendants.

17 First, Plaintiffs refer to Judge Carney’s order ruling on Visa’s motion to dismiss 18 in Fleites and argue that “Judge Carney’s reasoning applies to the claims against 19 Colbeck and Redwood as well.” Opp’n 62:15-16. Plaintiffs ignore that, as shown in 20 the Motion, Judge Carney’s order supports dismissal of Plaintiffs’ claims against the 21 CB Defendants. Mot. Mem. 15:1-14. Rather than refute this, Plaintiffs argue that their 22 “claims arise from the monetization of Plaintiffs’ sex acts” and that Judge Carney held 23 Visa had a “key role in monetizing illegal CSAM content, including the plaintiff’s 24 [sic].” Opp’n 62:13-14, 63:12-13. But unlike the allegations against Visa, the CB 25 Defendants are not said to have provided any tools for MindGeek to profit from CSAM.
26 See Mot. Mem. 15:5-8. At most, Plaintiffs allege that the CB Defendants participated 27 in loans, proceeds of which the MindGeek Borrowers used in generally operating their 28 business. The CB Defendants’ role as lenders is not specific to monetizing CSAM

1 generally or as to Plaintiffs individually. As explained in the Motion, Plaintiffs’ flawed 2 view of the law would mean that any third-party service provider allegedly connected 3 in any way to MindGeek’s business could be sued for Plaintiffs’ injuries. Mot. Mem.
4 14:1-9. This is especially true for the CB Defendants under Judge Carney’s order.
5 Judge Carney based his ruling as to Visa on the fact that it suspended MindGeek’s 6 merchant privileges in December 2020, which resulted in MindGeek removing millions 7 of videos, but Visa then reinstated those privileges despite the alleged issues of CSAM 8 continuing. See Mot. Mem. 15:8-13. No similar plausible basis for knowledge of 9 CSAM issues or control and influence in decisioning-making over MindGeek exists as 10 to the CB Defendants. See id.

11 Second, Plaintiffs argue that “[t]he existence of other lenders” does not disrupt 12 the traceability analysis for the CB Defendants. Opp’n 67:8-25. To begin with, 13 Plaintiffs’ argument concedes that [REDACTED]

14 [REDACTED]. See id.; Mot. Mem.

15 10:25-11:1. [REDACTED]

16 [REDACTED]
17 [REDACTED]
18 [REDACTED] Mot. Mem. 10:25-11:4.

19 Plaintiffs’ concession also undoes Plaintiffs’ standing argument (and shows there is no 20 causation) as to the CB Defendants because Plaintiffs’ injuries would have occurred 21 regardless of whether the CB Defendants participated in the loans. Mot. Mem. 14:10-22 21. Even if the Court were to take as true Plaintiffs’ conclusory assertion that [REDACTED]

23 [REDACTED] (Opp’n 67:9-12), it would still 24 be the case that [REDACTED]

25 [REDACTED]
26 [REDACTED].
27 Plaintiffs’ theory of standing and causation also fails because it is based on what 28 the CB Defendants allegedly could have done, not anything they actually did. Even if

1 the allegations were sufficiently pled, which they are not, failing to take certain 2 precautions identified by Plaintiffs does not make the CB Defendants a “substantial 3 factor” or a “determinative or coercive effect on the actions of another” in causing 4 Plaintiffs’ alleged injuries. Williams v. Sisolak, No. 22-16859, 2024 WL 194180, at *2 5 (9th Cir. Jan. 18, 2024) (citation omitted); cf. Labowitz v. Bird Rides, Inc., No. 2:18-cv-
6 9329, 2019 WL 8750219, at *3-4, 6 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 29, 2019) (cited in Opp’n 62:18-7 63:6) (finding Article III standing for claims against city defendants and electric vehicle 8 company defendants relating to electric scooters impeding pedestrians rights of way 9 because, unlike here, “many of the independent actions . . . are produced by or the result 10 of [the defendants’] challenged conduct”).² Plaintiffs’ injuries stem directly from the 11 conduct of independent third parties—in particular, their alleged direct traffickers.
12 Even after the direct traffickers, there are the MindGeek Entity Defendants and the 13 MindGeek Borrowers. This alleged chain of causation is at best “hypothetical or 14 tenuous” and “[im]plausible” (see Opp’n 63:7-8 (quoting Labowitz, 2019 WL 8750219, 15 at *6)), and ultimately insufficient for Article III standing and causation.

16 Third, like the plaintiff’s opposition in Fleites, the Opposition here sets up a 17 strawman by stating that a defendant need not “personally commit the act that harms 18 plaintiff” or that standing may exist even if other parties also bear responsibility. Opp’n 19 62:17-18, 68:1-16. The CB Defendants do not contend that Plaintiffs have failed to 20 show standing only because the CB Defendants did not personally commit the act that 21 harmed Plaintiffs (participating in the acts depicted in, recording, uploading, viewing, 22 or even deciding whether to remove the videos) or because only one person may be 23 responsible for the alleged harm. Plaintiffs lack standing because no act by a CB 24 Defendant was a “substantial factor” or had a “determinative or coercive effect on the 25 actions of another” in causing Plaintiffs’ alleged injuries. Williams, 2024 WL 194180, 26

27 ² Plaintiffs also cite generally Brill v. Chevron Corp., No. 3:15-cv-4916-JD, 2017 WL 28 76894, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 9, 2017). As shown in the CB Defendants’ Fleites Reply, Brill is not on point. See CB Defs.’ Fleites MTD Reply § I, 3:13-4:5.

1 at *2.

2 None of the cases that Plaintiffs cite supports finding standing (or causation) as 3 to the CB Defendants.³ These cases do not, and cannot, change the Article III 4 requirement of a sufficient, traceable connection between the defendant's acts and the 5 injury complained of. See Lujan v. Defs. Of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992); 6 Washington Env't Council v. Bellon, 732 F.3d 1131, 1141 (9th Cir. 2013). "[A] plaintiff 7 must demonstrate standing for each claim he seeks to press." DaimlerChrysler Corp.
8 v. Cuno, 547 U.S. 332, 352 (2006). Allegations of conspiracy or aiding and abetting 9 liability do not permit plaintiffs to forgo Article III traceability analysis for an alleged 10 co-conspirator. See Perez v. Nidek Co., 711 F.3d 1109, 1112-13 (9th Cir. 2013) 11 (rejecting plaintiff's "endeavor[] to sidestep the traceability hurdle . . . through his 12 allegations of conspiracy and aiding and abetting").

13 There is no connection between loans extended by the CB Defendants and the 14 actions by Plaintiffs' alleged direct traffickers. See Doe v. Walmart, No. 18-cv-2125, 15 2019 WL 499754, at *9 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 8, 2019) (holding plaintiffs failed to show how 16 they were injured by defendant allegedly providing funding for the alleged extortion 17 scheme). The CB Defendants' remote role as lenders and the absence of any allegations 18 connecting them to Plaintiffs or the videos—neither of which the Opposition 19 meaningfully disputes—confirms that "the causal chain involves numerous third parties 20 whose independent decisions collectively have a significant effect on plaintiffs' 21 injuries," and "the causal chain is too weak to support standing." Washington Env't 22 Council, 732 F.3d at 1142.

25 3, 2013) (finding standing because fiduciary defendants took affirmative actions to 26 protect, and conceal acts by, other fiduciaries who had allegedly breached duties to 27 plaintiffs); Nat'l Org. for Women, Inc. v. Scheidler, 510 U.S. 249, 255-56 (1994) 28 (plaintiff health care clinics alleged a coalition of anti-abortion groups, which shared a common purpose and agreement to shut down the clinics, had directly injured clinics' business or property interests); Oxbow Carbon & Mins. LLC v. Union Pac. R.R. Co., 81 F. Supp. 3d 1, 7-8 (D.D.C. 2015) (actions of both defendants allegedly directly caused illegal surcharge and monopoly).

1 Fourth, Plaintiffs also try to write Article III out of the Constitution by arguing 2 that FOSTA, a 2018 amendment to the Section 230 safe harbors of the Communications
3 Decency Act, alone confers standing on Plaintiffs for their TVPRA claims. See Opp’n 4 63:25-28 n.49, 68:18-69:3. Plaintiffs contend that “Congress conferred Article III 5 standing for all claims” under Sections 1591(a)(2) and 1595. Opp’n 68:27-69:1. This 6 is wrong. Congress cannot legislate away the standing requirement. Thole v. U.S. Bank 7 N.A., 590 U.S. 538, 544 (2020) (holding existence of a cause of action “does not affect 8 the Article III standing analysis”). FOSTA does not obviate Plaintiffs’ obligation to 9 show Article III standing.

10 In Coubaly v. Cargill, Inc., the court rejected the same argument that Plaintiffs 11 make here—that Article III standing is not required for a TVPRA claim. 610 F. Supp.
12 3d 173, 182-83 (D.D.C. 2022). Like Plaintiffs here, the plaintiffs in Coubaly could not 13 sufficiently connect the defendants to the plaintiffs’ direct traffickers. Id. at 180-81.
14 The court found that the defendants’ alleged knowledge of their suppliers’ trafficking 15 conduct (employment of children) was insufficient and that the complaint did not 16 adequately address the role of intermediaries. See id. The court dismissed the plaintiffs’ 17 TVPRA claim for lack of standing because the plaintiffs’ theory contained uncertainty 18 in the chain of causation related to the alleged trafficking conduct. Id. at 180-82.
19 Plaintiffs’ argument and claims against the CB Defendants have the same flaws and 20 should suffer the same fate.

21 Fifth, Plaintiffs argue that they need not plead proximate cause for Article III 22 standing or for TVPRA claims. Opp’n 69:5-7. As to Article III standing, Plaintiffs’ 23 argument misses the point. The CB Defendants never argued that a lack of “proximate 24 cause” is the reason Plaintiffs lack standing. As shown in the Motion and confirmed 25 above, Plaintiffs lack standing because they do not meet the requirements for standing 26 set forth by the U.S. Constitution and precedent from the U.S. Supreme Court and Ninth 27 Circuit. And as to the TVPRA claims, as explained in the CB Defendants’ Fleites
28 Reply, causation is indeed required for a TVPRA claim, and no matter what causation

1 standard is applied (proximate or otherwise), Plaintiffs’ alleged injuries lack any 2 meaningful causal link to the CB Defendants. CB Defs.’ Fleites MTD Reply § I, 4:6-3 17 (citing cases); see also Mot. Mem. 11:23-15:14, 26:3-19, 26:23-28 n.14, 32:18-33:1, 4 37:16-40:1.

5 Sixth, Plaintiffs, citing City of Los Angeles v. Wells Fargo & Co., 22 F. Supp.
6 3d 1047, 1054 (C.D. Cal. 2014), contend that they should be able to conduct discovery
7 to obtain more information on the “factual question” of the CB Defendants’ control over 8 the MindGeek Borrowers. Opp’n 67:21-25. But City of Los Angeles merely states that 9 the plaintiff may conduct discovery to obtain evidence to prove a claim if, under the 10 pleading standards, Article III is met. 22 F. Supp. 3d at 1054. Where, as here, the 11 allegations are conclusory, contradictory, and implausible, there is no Article III 12 standing to carry the case over the pleading stage into discovery. See Cady v. Anthem 13 Blue Cross Life & Health Ins., 583 F. Supp. 2d 1102, 1107 (N.D. Cal. 2008) (citing 14 Steel Co. v. Citizens for a Better Env’t, 523 U.S. 83, 93-94 (1998)) (denying the 15 plaintiff’s request for discovery to determine whether standing exists because the court 16 “cannot assume ‘hypothetical jurisdiction’ to order discovery” where there is no 17 standing); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 678-79 (“Rule 8 . . . does not unlock the doors of 18 discovery for a plaintiff armed with nothing more than conclusions.”). Plaintiffs cannot 19 avoid either their burden to show standing or the causation element of their claims by 20 speculating that discovery may fix the flaws in their claims against the CB Defendants.

21 II. Plaintiffs Do Not Overcome Their Failure to Plead a Plausible Claim for 22 TVPRa Beneficiary Liability Against the CB Defendants

23 Incorporating the arguments from the Fleites Opposition, Plaintiffs primarily 24 rely on G.G. v. Salesforce.com, Inc., 76 F.4th 544 (7th Cir. 2023), and Doe I v. Deutsche 25 Bank Aktiengesellschaft, 671 F. Supp. 3d 387 (S.D.N.Y. 2023). Opp’n 6:1-7:14, 8:12-26 17, 8:28-9:27, 20:2-6, 21:17-22:3.⁴ Neither case saves Plaintiffs’ TVPRA claims for 27

28 ⁴ Plaintiffs alternate between citing to the Fleites Opposition or restating arguments from that opposition. To the extent that Plaintiffs incorporate the Fleites Opposition, 1 beneficiary liability against the CB Defendants.

2 In Salesforce, Backpage.com committed criminal sex-trafficking violations 3 under Section 1591(a)(1) by advertising the plaintiff and other minors for “sale” on its 4 webpage. Salesforce, 76 F.4th at 552. Defendant Salesforce.com had a years-long 5 partnership with Backpage during which it was actively involved in supporting the 6 actual sex-trafficking conduct with the actual sex trafficker, Backpage. Id. at 549-50.
7 Salesforce “repeatedly consulted with Backpage ‘to assess its operational needs,’ 8 designed ‘targeted solutions addressed to’ those needs, and provided active, ‘tailored,’ 9 and ongoing support,” including customized software, which was used in Backpage’s 10 trafficking of minors. Id. at 556. Similarly, in Deutsche Bank, the plaintiff alleged that 11 defendants JP Morgan and Deutsche Bank knew of and actively concealed the actual 12 sex trafficker’s (Jeffrey Epstein) sex-trafficking enterprise through structuring 13 payments and withdrawals to evade detection and by failing to file suspicious activity 14 reports. Deutsche Bank, 671 F. Supp. 3d at 406-07. A bank officer from JP Morgan 15 was even alleged to have engaged in sexual contact with a minor, and a JP Morgan
16 subsidiary was alleged to have engaged in the transport and trafficking of Epstein’s 17 victims. Id. at 399, 406, 410.

18 The alleged conduct of the CB Defendants falls far short of the allegations made 19 against Salesforce, JP Morgan, and Deutsche Bank. Plaintiffs do not allege that the CB 20 Defendants provided tools or means by which sex trafficking could occur. Nor do 21 Plaintiffs allege that the CB Defendants concealed any trafficking activity. There are 22 no allegations of any involvement or participation in sex trafficking by the CB 23 Defendants—they participated in loans. In addition, the CB Defendants are not alleged 24 to have had any contact at all with the sex traffickers who exploited Plaintiffs. Judge 25 Carney has already held in Fleites that MindGeek is not a direct trafficker—the people 26 who took and uploaded the videos of the plaintiffs are the traffickers. Fleites v.

27 _____
28 the CB Defendants incorporate their Fleites Reply. See CB Defs.’ Fleites MTD Reply § II, 4:18-12:13.

1 MindGeek S.à.r.l., 617 F. Supp. 3d 1146, 1160 (C.D. Cal. 2022).

2 Salesforce and Deutsche Bank do not change that Plaintiffs' TVPRA claims for 3 beneficiary liability against the CB Defendants fail because they (1) did not knowingly 4 participate in a sex-trafficking venture, (2) did not knowingly benefit from participation 5 in a trafficking venture, and (3) did not know of Plaintiffs' alleged sex trafficking or 6 any alleged sex-trafficking venture.

7 (1) No knowing participation in trafficking venture. Plaintiffs argue that 8 participation in a "venture" does not require the venture to be a sex-trafficking venture 9 and that the CB Defendants' loans to the MindGeek Borrowers and their alleged 10 involvement with MindGeek constitute participation in a venture. Opp'n 17:1-21:2.

11 First, courts in this district, including Judge Carney in Fleites, and other courts 12 have held that beneficiary liability under the TVPRA requires participation in a "sex 13 trafficking venture."⁵ Plaintiffs cite Judge Carney's Fleites decision on Visa's motion 14 to dismiss in other sections of their Opposition, but they ignore the part of that decision 15 that dismissed the plaintiff's beneficiary liability claim against Visa. Plaintiffs cannot 16 have it both ways. Under Judge Carney's decision in Fleites, Plaintiffs plead no 17 TVPRA beneficiary liability claim against the CB Defendants.

18 Even if the TVPRA only required participation in a "commercial venture," as 19 Plaintiffs contend, Plaintiffs do not allege that the CB Defendants participated in a 20 commercial venture. Rather, the Complaints allege that the CB Defendants participated 21 in "MindGeek's sex trafficking venture" and that the CB Defendant's profits stemmed

22 ⁵ See Fleites, 617 F. Supp. 3d at 1160; Does 1-6 v. Reddit, Inc., 51 F.4th 1137, 1143 23 (9th Cir. 2022) ("gravamen' of a section 1595 beneficiary claim is the defendant's 24 participation in and benefit from the trafficking scheme"); Deutsche Bank, 671 F.
25 Supp. 3d at 405 ("the defendant must have participated in a commercial sex trafficking 26 venture"); Doe v. Wyndham Hotels & Resorts, No. 8:23-cv-01554-JVS-JDE, 2024 WL 27 2104596, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 28, 2024) ("The second element of a § 1595 claim is 28 whether Defendants knowingly participated in a sex trafficking venture."); Geiss v.
Weinstein Co. Holdings LLC, 383 F. Supp. 3d 156, 169 (S.D.N.Y. 2019) ("The participation giving rise to the benefit must be participation in a sex-trafficking venture, not participation in other activities engaged in by the sex traffickers that do not further the sex-trafficking aspect of their venture.") (emphases added).

1 from MindGeek’s commercialization of CSAM. See, e.g., K.A. Compl. ¶¶ 346-47, 350-
2 51; see Doe #1 v. Red Roof Inns, Inc., 21 F.4th 714, 726-27 (11th Cir. 2021) (refusing 3 to allow plaintiffs to base beneficiary liability claim on participation in “commercial 4 ventures” because complaints alleged participation in “sex trafficking ventures”); B.J.
5 v. G6 Hosp., LLC, No. 22-cv-03765-MMC, 2023 WL 3569979, at *5 (N.D. Cal. May 6 19, 2023) (same).

7 Second, Plaintiffs (i) misstate the Motion by asserting that the CB Defendants 8 “argue that participation requires control and management of the venture’s sex 9 trafficking activities and the specific activities targeting Plaintiffs” and (ii) argue 10 erroneously that an “overt act” in furtherance of a sex-trafficking venture is not 11 required. Opp’n 7:1-16; Mot. Mem. 18:22-19:1. But even in Salesforce, the court held 12 that “participation” under Section 1595(a) “require[s] more than . . . mere passive 13 nonfeasance” and “more than providing off-the-shelf software [] or other common 14 products or services”—the defendant must take action related to the trafficking that goes 15 beyond a general business transaction. 76 F.4th at 562-64. Unlike in Salesforce, the 16 CB Defendants were “arms-length [lenders] of off-the-shelf [loans],” [REDACTED]
17 [REDACTED]. 76 F.4th at 562. Plaintiffs do not and cannot plausibly 18 allege that any CB Defendant engaged in “direct, active, and substantial” aid related to 19 sex trafficking. Id. at 564; see Mot. Mem. 9:14-14:22, 18:18-20:15. Likewise, the 20 Deutsche Bank court held that the plaintiff adequately alleged that the defendant banks 21 “participated in Jeffrey Epstein’s sex-trafficking venture” because the banks “went well 22 beyond merely providing their usual services to [] Epstein and his affiliated entities.” 23 671 F. Supp. 3d at 405-06 (holding defendants liable for “‘structuring’ cash withdrawals 24 so that those withdrawals would not appear suspicious,” delaying and “willfully failing 25 to file suspicious activity reports,” and “conceal[ing] delivery of hundreds of thousands 26 of dollars in cash to Epstein and his associates”). “[A]n entity that . . . simply provide[s] 27 to the venture the same products and services that it provides [to other ventures] does 28 not ‘participate’ in that venture.” T.S. v. Wyndham Hotels & Resorts, Inc., No. 23-cv-

1 2530-PJS-ECW, 2024 WL 3927382, at *10 (D. Minn. Aug. 23, 2024). “[S]omething 2 more than engaging in an ordinary buyer-seller transaction is required to establish 3 ‘participation.’” Doe I v. Apple Inc., 96 F.4th 403, 415 (D.C. Cir. 2024). Routine loans 4 to the MindGeek Borrowers through Loan Agreements with standard terms do not 5 equate to the CB Defendants knowingly participating in a venture in violation of the 6 TVPRA.

7 Courts have declined to follow the “continuous business relationship” analysis 8 in Salesforce cited by Plaintiffs as a basis to infer participation (Opp’n 8:8-17 (citing 9 Fleites Opp’n 6)). See Unknown Parties v. Google LLC, No. 23-cv-05523-VC, 2024 10 WL 1892291, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 29, 2024) (distinguishing Salesforce and finding 11 standard revenue-sharing agreement between YouTube and its channels did not 12 constitute a “continuous business relationship”); see also T.S., 2024 WL 3927382, at 13 *9-10 (rejecting Salesforce’s interpretation of the “continuous business standard,” 14 which would impose “strict liability on anyone who is in a ‘continuous business 15 relationship’” with businesses with a risk for sex-trafficking). In any event, as stated in 16 cases that Plaintiffs cite in the Opposition or incorporate by reference from the Fleites 17 Opposition, a “continuous business relationship” requires a relationship with the 18 plaintiff’s direct trafficker. See, e.g., Acevedo v. eXp Realty, LLC, 713 F. Supp. 3d 740, 19 783 (C.D. Cal. 2024) (“a plaintiff must allege the defendant had a direct association or 20 a business relationship with their trafficker”).⁶ No such relationship exists for the CB 21 Defendants.

22 Plaintiffs also assert erroneously that the ruling in Salesforce did not depend on

23
24 ⁶ Doe v. Mindgeek USA Inc., 558 F. Supp. 3d 828, 837 (C.D. Cal. 2021) (plaintiff must 25 “allege at least a showing of a continuous business relationship between the trafficker 26 and Defendants”) (emphasis added); Salesforce, 76 F.4th at 562 (distinguishing 27 Salesforce from defendants that did not have relationships with sex traffickers); see also 28 G.W. v. Northbrook Indus., Inc., No. 1:20-cv-05232-JPB, 2024 WL 3166083, at *6 (N.D. Ga. June 14, 2024) (rejecting plaintiff’s theory that venture need not involve the entity had any involvement in the plaintiff’s trafficking”).

1 Backpage being a direct trafficker. Opp’n 8:28-9:8. The Salesforce court, in fact, 2 distinguished Salesforce from TVPRA defendants that are “one step removed from the 3 sex traffickers (i.e., street-level trafficker – > hotel – > hotel franchisor)” to find that 4 Salesforce’s “direct and long-term contractual relationship with the sex-trafficker” was 5 the basis for the beneficiary liability claim to survive. Salesforce, 76 F.4th at 561-62 6 (emphasis added).

7 Plaintiffs’ reliance on J.C. v. Choice Hotels Int’l, Inc., No. 20-cv-00155-WHO, 8 2020 WL 6318707 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 28, 2020) and M.A. v. Wyndham Hotels & Resorts, 9 Inc., 425 F. Supp. 3d 959 (S.D. Ohio 2019), is also misplaced. See Opp’n 20-28. In 10 both cases, the plaintiffs plausibly alleged that the defendants “directly ‘participated in 11 a venture’ by providing lodging to [the plaintiffs’ direct traffickers]” where the 12 trafficking took place. J.C., 2020 WL 6318707, at *7; M.A., 425 F. Supp. 3d 959, 970.
13 S.C. v. Hilton Franchise Holding LLC, No. 2:23-cv-02037-APG-DJA, 2024 WL 14 4773981 (D. Nev. Nov. 12, 2024) is similarly unavailing because the court found that 15 the plaintiff had plausibly alleged that the defendant hotel franchisor “assisted, 16 supported, or facilitated” the plaintiff’s trafficking. Opp’n 8:19-24; see S.C., 2024 WL 17 4773981, at *2. The defendant in S.C. v. Hilton also had extensive control over the 18 franchisee’s operations and was made aware of the plaintiff’s trafficking by the 19 franchisee’s employees and the direct trafficker’s suspicious activity through the 20 defendant’s room reservation software, which was used to reserve the rooms for the 21 trafficker. 2024 WL 4773981, at *2, 5. Plaintiffs do not dispute that the CB Defendants 22 never interacted with Plaintiffs’ direct traffickers. Even under cases cited favorably by 23 Plaintiffs, the lack of a connection between the CB Defendants and the alleged 24 traffickers dooms Plaintiffs’ beneficiary liability claim against the CB Defendants.

25 Third, Plaintiffs fail to rebut that a lender-borrower relationship is not enough 26 to make the lender liable for alleged misconduct of the borrower, including under the 27 TVPRA. See Mot. Mem. 38:1-39:26 (citing cases). Plaintiffs inaptly compare the CB
28 Defendants’ role as lenders to that of hotel franchisors that exercised day to day control

1 over their franchisees' businesses and actively monitored trafficking activity at their 2 franchisee hotels. See Opp'n 20:20-28. Unlike in the cases cited by Plaintiffs, here, the 3 loans in 2011 and 2013 were typical lending services, and no plausible allegation 4 supports that the CB Defendants engaged in any conduct beyond their typical role as 5 lenders. The CB Defendants did not maintain the websites onto which the videos of 6 Plaintiffs were uploaded; monitor or moderate those websites; process payments for 7 those websites; or provide any tool, software, or other means that furthered or was used 8 to further the alleged sex-trafficking.

9 (2) No knowing benefit from participation in trafficking venture. Plaintiffs 10 argue that the CB Defendants knowingly benefitted from participation in a sex-11 trafficking venture because profits MindGeek generated were used to repay the loans 12 made by the CB Defendants. Opp'n 23:5-9. Plaintiffs also argue that the CB
13 Defendants seek to impose a "quid pro quo" requirement into Section 1595. Opp'n 14 9:13-20. The first argument is not enough to show beneficiary liability, and the second 15 argument misstates the Motion. Neither argument saves Plaintiffs' claims from 16 dismissal.

17 Plaintiffs simply have not alleged a relationship between the CB Defendants' 18 conduct in furtherance of the sex-trafficking venture and receipt of a benefit. Mot.
19 Mem. 20:16-21:1. This is required for a beneficiary liability claim. See id.; see also 20 Doe v. Mindgeek USA Inc., 558 F. Supp. 3d at 839 n.5 (cited favorably by Plaintiffs, 21 Opp'n 5:8-9, 8:10-11) (denying motion to dismiss beneficiary liability claim because 22 plaintiff, unlike Plaintiffs here, sufficiently "allege[d] a direct connection between the 23 underlying sex trafficking . . . and the benefits Defendants received from their 24 participation in the venture"); see also S.J. v. Choice Hotels Int'l, Inc., 473 F. Supp. 3d 25 147, 153 (E.D.N.Y. 2020) (beneficiary liability requires actual or constructive 26 knowledge that the defendant was "facilitating a sex trafficking venture") (emphasis 27 added). Plaintiffs' concept of beneficiary liability would make any recipient of funds 28 from MindGeek for any purpose a knowing beneficiary of sex-trafficking activity. That

1 is not and cannot be the law. See T.S., 2024 WL 3927382, at *8 (rejecting Salesforce's 2 interpretation of the statute which would hold liable any defendant "who at any time in 3 the past . . . knowingly benefitted from participating in any venture . . . that violated § 4 1591(a)").

5 Further, B.M. v. Wyndham Hotels & Resorts, Inc., which Plaintiffs rely on, held 6 that the "'knowing benefit' element under Section 1595 requires Defendant to 7 knowingly receive a financial benefit . . . from a relationship with the trafficker." No.
8 20-cv-00656-BLF, 2020 WL 4368214, at *4 (N.D. Cal. July 30, 2020) (emphasis 9 added). Plaintiffs do not allege that the CB Defendants received a financial benefit from 10 a relationship with Plaintiffs' direct traffickers. Unlike the defendants in the cases cited 11 by Plaintiffs, whose conduct was directly tied to their benefit from the sex-trafficking 12 venture, there is no nexus between the CB Defendants' alleged benefit (interest and fees 13 from loans to the MindGeek Borrowers) and the actions of Plaintiffs' alleged traffickers, 14 with whom the CB Defendants had no involvement. See, e.g., Deutsche Bank, 671 F.
15 Supp. 3d at 408 (defendants "received revenue from Jeffrey Epstein and his affiliated 16 entities in exchange for their furtherance of Epstein's sex-trafficking venture"); 17 Salesforce, 76 F.4th at 567 (Salesforce benefitted from contracts for customized 18 software that Backpage used to increase profitability of trafficking). Repayment of 19 loans constitutes at most "receipt of a passive benefit" unconnected to Plaintiffs' alleged 20 trafficking or a sex-trafficking venture. See Ratha v. Phatthana Seafood Co., No. 2:16-21 cv-4271-JFW-AS, 2017 WL 8293174, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2017) ("receipt of a 22 passive benefit" is insufficient"), aff'd, 26 F.4th 1029 (9th Cir. 2022)⁷; see also

23
24 ⁷ Plaintiffs argue that the holding in Ratha was specifically limited to ventures 25 involving forced labor. See Opp'n 7:24-28 n.6 (citing Ratha, 2017 WL 8293174, at *4 26 (C.D. Cal.)). The court in Ratha, however, neither specifically limited its analysis in 27 that way nor held that participation in a sex-trafficking venture need not be based on a 28 direct role in the illegal activities of the venture. See Ratha, 2017 WL 8293174, at *4.
Instead, the court simply noted that the plaintiff's argument was based on a definition of "venture" specific to sex trafficking. Id. Citing a Sixth Circuit opinion on sex-trafficking beneficiary liability, the court in Ratha then held that the plaintiffs presented no evidence that the defendants acted to operate or manage the venture in violation of

1 Salesforce, 76 F.4th at 563-64 (“Section 1595(a)’s standard of knowing benefit from 2 participation in a venture that has violated Section 1591 [] require[s] more than . . .
3 passive nonfeasance or an arm’s length, passive, and largely indifferent relationship 4 with the [trafficker].”) (citation omitted).

5 (3) No knowledge of alleged trafficking. Plaintiffs also fail to plausibly allege 6 that the CB Defendants had actual or constructive knowledge of Plaintiffs’ alleged 7 trafficking or an alleged trafficking venture.

8 To begin with, Plaintiffs’ argument that the CB Defendants need not know of 9 Plaintiffs or Plaintiffs’ trafficking contravenes the plain text of the TVPRA. See 18 10 U.S.C. §§ 1591(a), 1591(e), 1595(a). Section 1595(a) provides that “[a]n individual 11 who is a victim of a violation of this chapter may bring a civil action against the 12 perpetrator (or whoever knowingly benefits . . . from participation in a venture which 13 that person knew or should have known has engaged in an act in violation of this 14 chapter).” “Participation in a venture” is defined under Section 1591(e)(4) as 15 “knowingly assisting, supporting or facilitating a violation of subsection 1591(1).” 16 Section 1591(a)(1), in turn, provides that a defendant violates the TVPRA if the 17 defendant “knowingly . . . recruits, entices, harbors, transports, provides, obtains, 18 advertises, maintains, patronizes, or solicits by any means a person . . . to engage in a 19 commercial sex act.” Thus, the entire inquiry under Section 1591 relates to the 20 trafficking of “a person,” which requires actual or constructive knowledge of the 21 plaintiff. There is no general violation of Section 1591.

22 Indeed, Judge Carney held in Fleites that the plaintiff must plausibly allege that 23 the defendant “knew or should have known that the plaintiff was a victim of sex 24 trafficking.” Fleites, 617 F. Supp. 3d at 1160. Other courts have held the same. See 28 ⁸ Plaintiffs do not meaningfully distinguish Red Roof Inns. Opp’n 22:18-24 n.13.

Contrary to the Opposition, the Eleventh Circuit explicitly held that the plaintiff must

No. 2:22-cv-00672-KJM-JDP, 2022 WL 10626493, at *5 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 18, 2022) (“general knowledge of sex trafficking . . . is insufficient to demonstrate defendants should have known about [plaintiff]’s trafficking”).⁹ Plaintiffs argue that the cases cited by Defendants concerned trafficking ventures involving few victims. Opp’n 6-7 n. 5. But these cases did not limit their holdings in that way. See, e.g., K.B. v. G6 Hosp., LLC, et al., No. 1:23-cv-2597-TWT, 2024 WL 4701891, at *2 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 5, 2024) (noting court in Red Roof Inns “did not differentiate its analysis based on how the venture was defined”).

The Opposition incorrectly asserts that the “only argument” by the CB Defendants on this issue is that they lack specific knowledge of Plaintiffs’ videos. Opp’n 21:22-25. As explained in the Motion and confirmed in this reply, however, even if, as Plaintiffs contend, knowledge of the individual plaintiff is not required, the Complaints do not plausibly allege that the CB Defendants knew or constructively knew of any sex-trafficking venture, which is clearly required. See Mot. Mem. 18:9-19:23; T.S., 2024 WL 3927382, at *8 (“plaintiff must plead and ultimately prove that the defendant had actual or constructive knowledge of the particular sex-trafficking venture that harmed the plaintiff”); S.J., 473 F. Supp. 3d at 154 (plaintiff must allege defendant had “requisite knowledge of a specific sex trafficking venture” to be liable under the TVPRA). The allegations in the Complaints do not come close to what the courts in the cases that Plaintiffs cite found sufficient to constitute such knowledge. See Opp’n

Plaintiffs allege that MindGeek operated the “largest internet pornography platform,” which hosted content uploaded by third party users. See, e.g., K.A. Compl. ¶ 43. But willful blindness or even general knowledge of the risk that CSAM may be uploaded to the largest adult-content website in the world cannot equate to actual or constructive knowledge of a sex-trafficking venture. See S.J., 473 F. Supp. 3d at 154 (willful blindness is insufficient); Ratha v. Phatthana Seafood Co., 35 F.4th 1159, 1179 (9th Cir. 2022) (“Ratha I”) (general knowledge is insufficient).¹⁰

The fact that routine due diligence in connection with the loans—which occurred before most videos of Plaintiffs were posted to a MindGeek website—allegedly noted a general risk for “distribution of illegal material” similarly cannot result in an inference of knowledge of a trafficking venture. Contra Opp’n 21:9-20; see, e.g., K.A. Compl. ¶ 261.¹¹ Plaintiffs argue that their TVPRA claims against the CB Defendants are not

¹⁰ Plaintiffs argue incorrectly that the plaintiffs in Ratha I alleged only knowledge of trafficking in an industry generally, rather than trafficking by a defendant specifically. See Opp’n 21-22 n.12. The plaintiffs in Ratha I, in fact, had asserted knowledge of trafficking by a particular defendant; but the Ninth Circuit held that the plaintiffs—like Plaintiffs here—had provided insufficient support to establish knowledge of TVPRA violations during the relevant time period. See Ratha I, 35 F.4th 1177-78.

¹¹ In addition, as Plaintiffs acknowledge, due diligence in fact noted that [REDACTED]

1 based on allegations of sex trafficking in the online pornography industry generally, but 2 rather pertain specifically to MindGeek. Opp’n 22 n.12, n.14. But even if Plaintiffs 3 had adequately alleged that the CB Defendants knew of previous instances of CSAM 4 on MindGeek’s website, which Plaintiffs have not adequately alleged, that still is not 5 enough to meet the actual or constructive knowledge element for beneficiary liability.
6 For a defendant to be liable as a beneficiary under the TVPRA, the defendant must 7 know of a specific sex trafficking venture—it is not enough that the defendant knew 8 that a violation of Section 1591 occurred at some point or might occur in the future.
9 S.J., 473 F. Supp. 3d at 154. Plaintiffs’ interpretation of the statute would make it 10 “nearly impossible for a plaintiff not to satisfy § 1595’s knowledge requirement,” 11 especially for an online platform hosting user-uploaded adult content, as just about 12 every such platform would have “‘general, abstract’ knowledge that a violation of § 13 1595 likely occurred” on its platform. T.S., 2024 WL 3927382, at *8. Indeed, under 14 Plaintiffs’ interpretation, the TVPRA would “authorize[] any sex-trafficking victim to 15 sue any defendant . . . who at any time in the past (even decades ago) knowingly 16 benefitted from participating in any venture (even if the venture had nothing to do with 17 the plaintiff) that committed any act that violated § 1591(a) (even if the plaintiff was 18 not the victim of that act).” Id. Plaintiffs’ theory would make any entity that provided 19 a loan to any large online platform hosting user-uploaded content liable as a beneficiary 20 of sex trafficking for general knowledge that CSAM was previously uploaded to the 21 platform or could be uploaded in the future.

22 Plaintiffs also argue that the CB Defendants knew that MindGeek monetized 23 CSAM due to their involvement with the company during the time they had loans 24 outstanding to MindGeek. Opp’n 21:5-15. All that Plaintiffs cite in support of this 25 conclusory assertion that the CB Defendants received “extensive reporting” from 26 MindGeek, however, is the Loan Agreements’ terms. The terms [REDACTED]

8 [REDACTED]. See Mot. Mem. 8:19-9:3. There is nothing
9 remarkable—or wrongful—about a [REDACTED]

10 [REDACTED]. Virtually all loan documentation contains 11 such provisions. Plaintiffs cannot invert these provisions to show that the CB 12 Defendants knew and intended that MindGeek would engage in unlawful activity. See, 13 e.g., Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679 (a complaint is insufficient “where the well-pleaded facts 14 do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct”). To the 15 contrary, the provisions show that the CB Defendants expected and intended that 16 MindGeek would conduct its business lawfully.

17 Plaintiffs also argue that the CB Defendants knew of MindGeek’s monetization 18 of CSAM through their regular communication with the Individual Defendants. Opp’n 19 21:14-15 (citing K.A. Compl. ¶ 260). But Plaintiffs merely cite a paragraph of the K.A.
20 Complaint that alleges only that the CB Defendants conducted interviews with the 21 Individual Defendants as part of due diligence for the loans. Plaintiffs do not identify 22 any purported “regular communication[s]” or what was allegedly discussed during the 23 communications to put the CB Defendants on notice that MindGeek was violating the 24 TVPRA. These conclusory allegations fail to show the requisite knowledge for 25 beneficiary liability. See, e.g., Mot. Mem. 8:4-11:22, 21:2-16.

26 Plaintiffs’ allegation that the CB Defendants knew about a sex-trafficking 27 venture based on news articles is also contradicted by the Loan Agreements ([REDACTED] 28 [REDACTED]) and by the

1 Complaints (which state the issue of CSAM on MindGeek’s websites “exploded in 2 2019-2023.”) See, e.g., K.A. Compl. ¶ 113. This was after the CB Defendants exited 3 the MindGeek loans in 2018. See Opp’n 18:21-22. Further, the reporting that the 4 Complaints identify is mostly of isolated, individual cases of CSAM and non-5 consensual content of adults on MindGeek’s websites, and neither indicates a sex-6 trafficking venture nor is anything like the “bombshell” reporting by the New York 7 Times in 2020. Id. 22-23 n.14 (citing K.A. Compl. ¶¶ 161-176, 179-186). And the 8 2016 lawsuit against GirlsDoPorn (which Plaintiffs do not allege, other than in a 9 conclusion, that the CB Defendants knew about) did not involve CSAM, minors, or 10 claims under the TVPRA. Id.

11 Plaintiffs erroneously request discovery. Plaintiffs’ failure to plead a 12 beneficiary liability claim under the TVPRA against the CB Defendants is further 13 confirmed by their request for discovery on each element of their claims. Opp’n 6:18-14 23, 20:9-10, 22:8-9, 23:25-28 n.15. The cases that Plaintiffs cite do not support that 15 they can avoid their obligation to allege nonconclusory, plausible facts to support their 16 TVPRA claims.¹² Courts dismiss inadequately pled TVPRA claims despite plaintiffs’
17 requests for discovery. See, e.g., T.M. v. G6 Hosp. LLC, No. 1:23-cv-2598-MLB, 2024

3992416, at *6 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 2, 2013) (citation omitted) (rejecting attempt to “uncover potential factual allegations that [Plaintiff] cannot presently make”).

There is no fact question here. The unreasonable inferences that Plaintiffs ask the Court to make—based on conclusory, contradictory, and implausible allegations—are insufficient to state a claim. See Wilson, 668 F.3d at 1144 n.4. Like Visa in Fleites, which Judge Carney already held is not liable as a beneficiary, the CB Defendants did not “knowingly participat[e] in the sex trafficking venture that harmed Plaintiff.” Fleites, 617 F. Supp. 3d at 1162.

III. Plaintiffs Ask the Court to Save Their TVPRA Conspiracy Claims by Declining to Follow the Ninth Circuit

To support each Plaintiff’s TVPRA conspiracy claim, the Opposition repeats and incorporates by reference arguments in the Fleites Opposition. Opp’n 26:14-28:2. As explained in the CB Defendants’ Fleites Reply, Plaintiffs cannot avoid that the Ninth Circuit’s recent opinion in Ratha II forecloses Plaintiffs’ conspiracy claims under the TVPRA. See CB Defs.’ Fleites MTD Reply 12:14-14:3. The CB Defendants incorporate those same arguments here. Ratha II is plainly fatal to Plaintiffs’ conspiracy claims.

IV. Plaintiffs, In Any Event, Do Not Salvage the Complaints’ Failures to Allege a Conspiracy Involving the CB Defendants

Putting Ratha II to the side, Plaintiffs state that the elements of a civil conspiracy are the same as those of a conspiracy to violate the TVPRA. Opp’n 50:24-25. Plaintiffs contend that a conspiracy claim requires “(1) an agreement to accomplish an illegal objective, (2) the commission of an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy, and (3) the requisite intent necessary to commit the underlying offense.” Opp’n 50:24-51:3; see also Mot. Mem. 30:2-6 (listing conspiracy elements). In this reply, the CB Defendants address the elements as presented by Plaintiffs because the Complaints fail

1 to allege plausible facts to support any of those elements and save Plaintiffs' TVPRA
2 and civil conspiracy claims from dismissal.¹³

3 (1) No agreement to accomplish illegal objective. Plaintiffs acknowledge that 4 they must plead that there was a "meeting of the minds" such that the CB Defendants 5 made an "agreement to accomplish an illegal objective." Opp'n 27:1-2, 50:25-51:1, 6 52:9-10. Plaintiffs also concede that the Complaints do not plead an agreement 7 involving a CB Defendant to accomplish an illegal (or wrongful) objective. See Mot.
8 Mem. 30:10-31:3. Plaintiffs instead ask the Court to infer that the CB Defendants 9 agreed to assist MindGeek in monetizing CSAM. See Opp'n 27:4-11, 51:25-52:5, 53:3-10 7. Plaintiffs rely on cases that do not support finding an inference here. See Opp'n 27:7-11 11, 42:17-43:2.¹⁴

12 Plaintiffs base their statement that "a conspiracy may sometimes be inferred" on 13 an unpublished California court of appeal opinion. Opp'n 51:22-24 (emphasis added) 14 (quoting Safarian v. Shaham, No. B244709, 2014 WL 5038651, at *3 (Cal. Ct. App.

20 Therefore, the Court does not rely on those decisions in this Order."). That case, in any

21 _____
22 ¹³ To the extent that Plaintiffs incorporate arguments from the Fleites Opposition (see, 23 e.g., Opp'n 27:22-25, 51:27-28 n.40), the CB Defendants similarly incorporate their 24 Fleites Reply (see CB Defs.' Fleites MTD Reply § IV, 14:4-18:3), which further 25 supports that the Court should grant the Motion here.

26 ¹⁴ See United States v. Matta-Ballesteros, 71 F.3d 754, 765 (9th Cir. 1995) (defendant 27 was member of cartel that abducted, tortured, and murdered victim; defendant 28 participated in meetings with other cartel members where kidnapping was planned; and witness testimony tied defendant specifically to the crime); Transgo, Inc. v. Ajac Transmission Parts Corp., 768 F.2d 1001, 1020 (9th Cir. 1985) ("defendant 'entered into a joint enterprise with consciousness of its general nature and extent,'" as shown by specific allegations such as instructions by conspirator to another conspirator related to conspiracy).

1 event, does not provide any basis to support inferring an agreement by the CB 2 Defendants here. See Safarian, 2014 WL 5038651, at *3 (finding plaintiffs had 3 sufficiently alleged individual defendant’s knowledge of and voluntary acceptance of 4 benefits of fraudulent activities because, among other reasons, defendant was sole 5 owner and operator of offending entity).

6 Plaintiffs erroneously contend that “Defendants” argue that Plaintiffs’ claims 7 fail simply because they have not pled conspiracy with particularity. Opp’n 51:19-10.
8 As explained in the Motion, however, Plaintiffs fail to plead plausible allegations to 9 support any conspiracy involving the CB Defendants. Mot. Mem. 31:4-32:8, 32:27-10 33:1. Rather than refute this, the Opposition merely concludes that MindGeek was 11 engaged in a sex-trafficking venture that distributed CSAM and that the CB Defendants, 12 and the Redwood Defendants and Visa, knew and agreed to provide means that the 13 venture needed to grow. Opp’n 51:8-18. But Plaintiffs cite only deficient allegations 14 that the Motion established are conclusory and implausible and, in any event, do not 15 support any inference of an agreement. See Opp’n 52:1-5 (citing only “years-long 16 relationship[] with MindGeek”; alleged general knowledge of “MindGeek’s criminal 17 conduct”; and a motivation to profit); see also id. at 52:21-27.

18 The only nonconclusory allegation to infer an agreement is that the CB 19 Defendants participated in loans in 2011 and 2013. See Opp’n 17:11-18:25, 51:25-52:5.
20 Rather than support an inference of conspiracy to profit from or perpetuate CSAM in 21 any way, however, the plain language of the Loan Agreements contradicts such an 22 inference. Indeed, [REDACTED]
23 [REDACTED]
24 [REDACTED]. Loan Agreements §§ 6.01(h), 6.01(mm), 25 6.01(nn), 6.01(ss), 7.01(a), 7.01(c), 7.01(v), 7.01(z). Plaintiffs’ speculation that [REDACTED]
26 [REDACTED] does not 27 support an inference of an agreement to monetize CSAM. Plaintiffs do not and cannot 28 distinguish this case from those cited by the CB Defendants where courts declined to 1 infer a conspiracy. Mot. Mem. 31:4-16 (citing cases); see also Thinking Liberally

2 Media, Inc. v. Orange Juice Blog, No. 8:10-cv-00139-DOC, 2010 WL 11596144, at *5 3 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 19, 2010) (“actual knowledge of the planned tort, without more, is 4 insufficient to serve as the basis for a conspiracy”).

5 (2) No overt act in furtherance of conspiracy. Plaintiffs argue that they need 6 not allege that the CB Defendants “took any overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy.”
7 Opp’n 52:6-16. This does not save Plaintiffs’ conspiracy claim from dismissal.

8 First, Plaintiffs concede that a conspiracy claim requires an overt act in 9 furtherance of the conspiracy. But they neglect to identify any plausible overt act, by 10 any Defendant or anyone else, in furtherance of a conspiracy to perpetuate CSAM 11 involving the CB Defendants. The only overt acts identified in the Opposition relating 12 to the CB Defendants concern their participation in loans in 2011 and 2013 to the 13 MindGeek Borrowers. Opp’n 17:11-18:25.

14 Second, Plaintiffs admit that “an act in furtherance of the conspiracy” by the CB 15 Defendants is required to infer their intent, which, as explained below, Plaintiffs ask 16 the Court to do. Opp’n 27:11-13. Extending credit to a party that allegedly engaged in 17 unlawful conduct does not create a conspiracy between the lender and the borrower in 18 respect of such conduct. See, e.g., Compound Prop. Mgmt., LLC v. Build Realty, Inc., 19 462 F. Supp. 3d 839, 864-65 (S.D. Ohio 2020) (dismissing claims against lenders; 20 finding “allegations that a lending company engaged in due diligence with regard to its 21 lending activities cannot, and should not, be enough to plausibly establish [joinder in a 22 conspiracy] even at the pleading stage”); Young v. City of Menifee, No. 5:17-cv-01630-23 JGB-SP, 2019 WL 3037926, at *11 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 5, 2019) (granting motion to dismiss 24 because “[m]ere association does not make a conspiracy”). Plaintiff, at best, suggests 25 that the CB Defendants made loans despite possible risks of CSAM’s presence on 26 MindGeek’s websites. See, e.g., Opp’n 21:9-11. That is not an overt act in furtherance 27 of a conspiracy to benefit from sex trafficking.
28

1 (3) No intent to commit underlying offense. Plaintiffs, lacking allegations to 2 support this element, ask the Court to stack another inference on top of the inference of 3 an agreement: that the CB Defendants intended to financially benefit from sex 4 trafficking. Opp’n 27:11-13, 53:3-7.¹⁵ The only support that Plaintiffs provide the 5 Court to make this inference is that the CB Defendants “inten[ded] to profit” generally 6 from interest and fees and that “the court may infer intent from the Defendants’ 7 knowledge of the sex-trafficking and their actions taken in furtherance of the 8 conspiracy.” Opp’n 52:21-27, 53:3-7. But as explained in the Motion and above, these 9 allegations are conclusory, implausible, and contradicted, and Plaintiffs have not 10 plausibly alleged that the CB Defendants knew of sex trafficking or committed an overt 11 act in furtherance of any conspiracy to monetize CSAM. Mot. Mem. 30:7-32:17; supra
12 § IV(1), (2).¹⁶

13 Plaintiffs also argue that they “need not allege that each Defendant intended to 14 break each of the specific statutes or torts so long as all Defendants agreed, either tacitly 15 or explicitly, to further the MindGeek venture.” Opp’n 51:14-18 (citing In re McKinsey
16 & Co. Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., No. MDL-3084, 2024 WL 2261926, at *6-7 17 (N.D. Cal. May 16, 2024) (conspiracy liability requires defendant to have intended an 18 unlawful act or purpose)). Besides ignoring that there was no tacit or explicit agreement 19 involving a CB Defendant and that Plaintiffs admit that a conspiracy claim requires “an 20 agreement to accomplish an illegal objective” and “the requisite intent necessary to 21 commit the underlying offense” (supra § IV(1)), this is an irrelevant argument.

22
23 ¹⁵ Plaintiffs cite United States v. Calaway, which, unlike this case, involved specific, 24 quoted statements that supported the existence of a gambling-operation conspiracy. 524
F.2d 609, 614 (9th Cir. 1975).

25 ¹⁶ Even if there were a conspiracy, which there was not, the CB Defendants withdrew 26 from it by 2018 when they ceased any loans to the MindGeek Borrowers. See Opp’n 27 18:21-25. A conspirator “withdraws” from an alleged business conspiracy when it has 28 “retired from the business, severed all ties to the business, and deprived the remaining conspirator group of the services which [it] provided to the conspiracy.” Morton’s Mkt., Inc. v. Gustafson’s Dairy, Inc., 198 F.3d 823, 839 (11th Cir. 1999), amended in part, 211 F.3d 1224 (11th Cir. 2000).

1 Regardless of “break[ing]” “specific statutes or torts,” Plaintiffs do not dispute that the 2 defendant must intend to “aid in the wrongful activity.” Mot. Mem. 30:7-10 (quoting 3 Ajzenman v. Off. Of Comm’r of Baseball, 487 F. Supp. 3d 861, 867 (C.D. Cal. 2020))
4 (emphasis added); see id. at 31:17-32:8 (citing cases). As explained in the previous 5 paragraph, Plaintiffs do not plead such intent or any plausible allegations to infer the 6 CB Defendants had such an intent.

7 Plaintiffs’ Opposition references Judge Carney’s decision on Visa’s motion to 8 dismiss to support a conspiracy as to the CB Defendants. Opp’n 27:14-19. As shown 9 in the Motion, however, Judge Carney found elements of a conspiracy as to Visa 10 because its conduct and payment tool was enmeshed with the alleged unlawful conduct 11 of MindGeek and because specific allegations showed Visa’s knowledge and intent, 12 including stopping—and later continuing—to provide payment services. See Mot.
13 Mem. 23:16-23; see also Fleites, 617 F. Supp. 3d at 1163-64. No similar allegations 14 exist as to the CB Defendants, and no reasonable inference can be made as to their 15 knowledge or intent. See Mot. Mem. 23:23-24:5.

16 V. Plaintiffs Fail to Refute That the Complaints Plead No UCL or FAL Claim

17 Plaintiffs ignore two defects in the UCL and FAL claims against the CB 18 Defendants: Plaintiffs neither allege conduct by a CB Defendant nor have statutory 19 standing. Mot. Mem. 25:12-26:19. Plaintiffs simply repeat the conclusory allegation 20 from the Complaints that they suffered financial harm from Defendants’ “unfair 21 business practices” without addressing how the CB Defendants caused the alleged 22 harm. See Opp’n 54:10-13. Plaintiffs also fail to meaningfully refute other defects.

23 Plaintiffs limit their UCL claims to only the unlawful prong. See Opp’n 53:9-24 18. Plaintiffs’ only purported support for a claim under the unlawful prong is referring 25 to other claims and arguing that Defendants participated in a commercial venture with 26 MindGeek and conspired to commit common law torts. See Opp’n 53:12-14. Because 27 Plaintiffs’ other claims against the CB Defendants fail, as explained in the Motion and 28 above, Plaintiffs’ UCL claims also fail. See Johnson v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC,

1 No. 5:17-cv-1373-JGB-SP, 2017 WL 10581088, at *7 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 11, 2017)
2 (dismissing unlawful-prong UCL claim because other claims alleging violations of law 3 failed); see also Foundry IV Inc. v. Hard Carry Gaming Inc., No. 23-cv-2690-KK-4 MAR, 2024 WL 211010, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2024) (citation omitted) (“a common 5 law violation is, on its own, insufficient to establish a violation of the ‘unlawful’ prong 6 of the UCL”).

7 As to the FAL, rather than try to address the reasons in the Motion that show 8 their claims fail (see Mot. Mem. 28:8-19), Plaintiffs refer to alleged statements by 9 MindGeek or Messrs. Antoon and Tassillo (Opp’n 53:19-54:8) and alleged omissions 10 by the MindGeek Defendants. Statements by others cannot constitute 11 misrepresentations (see Mot. Mem. 28:8-19 (citing cases)), and Plaintiffs have not 12 alleged—especially not with particularity under Rule 9(b)—any omission by a CB 13 Defendant. There was no statement to and no interaction with any of the Plaintiffs, nor 14 could a CB Defendant have a duty to disclose to Plaintiffs. See LiMandri v. Judkins, 15 52 Cal. App. 4th 326, 336-37 (1997) (omission requires duty to disclose arising out of 16 “some sort of transaction” between plaintiff and defendant); Handy v. LogMeIn, Inc., 17 No. 1:14-cv-01355-JLT, 2015 WL 1729681, at *5-6 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 15, 2015) (cited 18 favorably by Plaintiff, Opp’n 54:8-9) (FAL omission must be “contrary to a 19 representation actually made by the defendant, or an omission of a fact the defendant 20 was obligated to disclose”). The Opposition effectively conceded Plaintiffs’ claims 21 under the FAL should be dismissed as to the CB Defendants.

22 VI. Plaintiffs Cannot Save Their IIED Claims Against the CB Defendants

23 Plaintiffs do not address the fatal defects that doom their IIED claims against the 24 CB Defendants. Plaintiffs do not dispute that the CB Defendants’ conduct must be 25 “extreme and outrageous conduct with the intention of causing, or reckless disregard of 26 the probability of causing, severe emotion distress to plaintiff” and that conduct was the 27 “actual and proximate cause of [Plaintiffs’] emotional distress.” Mot. Mem. 33:7-13 28 (quoting Doe v. Cal. Inst. of Tech., No. 2:19-cv-01005-AB-KS, 2020 WL 8463631, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 4, 2020)). Plaintiffs identify no such conduct by a CB Defendant. Plaintiffs instead refer to the alleged conduct of MindGeek and repeat the allegations that the CB Defendants participated in loans to the MindGeek Borrowers and that MindGeek commercialized and profited from CSAM. Opp’n 44:10-12, 45:6-10, 45:14. Participating in loans is not extreme and outrageous, nor was it the actual or proximate cause of any alleged emotional distress suffered by Plaintiffs here. Mot. Mem. 34:20-35:14; supra § I.

Further damning to Plaintiffs’ IIED claims is their admission that the CB Defendants’ conduct must be “directed towards plaintiffs.” Opp’n 45:28 n.32. Yet Plaintiffs do not, and cannot, refute that the only alleged conduct by the CB Defendants—participating in loans to the MindGeek Borrowers—was not “directed towards” Plaintiffs. See Mot. Mem. 33:17-34:19.

Plaintiffs’ reliance on Ford v. Revlon, Inc., 153 Ariz. 38, 43 (Ariz. 1987), is misplaced. See Opp’n 45:14-18. Besides arising under Arizona law, in Ford, the defendant employer had first-hand knowledge of the plaintiff’s harassment by her supervisor through the plaintiff’s multiple complaints to her managers and yet failed to intervene. 153 Ariz. at 44. By contrast, Plaintiffs do not dispute that the CB Defendants did not know of any Plaintiffs, their traffickers, or any videos of Plaintiffs, and thus could not have “directed” their conduct at Plaintiffs or acted with intent or reckless disregard that Plaintiffs would suffer emotional distress. See Mot. Mem. 33:17-34:19 (citing cases).

Plaintiffs’ attempt to distinguish Reaud v. Facebook Inc., No. 23-cv-06329-AMO, 2024 WL 4126066 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2024), exposes the lengths Plaintiffs have gone to distort the straightforward lender role of the CB Defendants. See Opp’n 45:21-25 n.31. The California district court in Reaud found the conduct of defendant Facebook “passive” and therefore insufficient to support the plaintiff’s IIED claim specifically because Facebook’s conduct—like the alleged conduct of the CB Defendants—was not “directed primarily” at the plaintiff. Reaud, 2024 WL 4126066,

1 at *3 (plaintiff “only assert[ed] in conclusory terms that Facebook ‘intentionally 2 injur[ed]’ him” and did “not allege any facts establishing that Facebook acted with an 3 intent to injure him or even with a realization that he would be injured”). No allegation 4 in any Complaint supports that the CB Defendants “had an active and intentional role 5 in the dissemination and monetization of Plaintiffs’ illicit images.” Opp’n 45:21-25 6 n.31. Plaintiffs do not, and cannot, overcome that no allegations support that a CB 7 Defendant engaged in extreme and outrageous conduct with the intention of causing, or 8 reckless disregard of the probability of causing, severe emotional distress to Plaintiffs 9 and that the outrageous conduct was the actual and proximate cause of the emotional 10 distress.

11 VII. Plaintiffs Cannot Save Their Untimely California Claims Against the CB
12 Defendants, Which Ceased all Loans to MindGeek Borrowers in 2018

13 Plaintiffs do not dispute the essential facts that show that their state-law claims 14 are barred by the applicable statutes of limitations. See Mot. Mem. 36:3-37:4. Plaintiffs 15 base their theory of liability against the CB Defendants on loans made to the MindGeek 16 Borrowers yet filed their Complaints over five years after the CB Defendants ceased all 17 loans. See Mot. Mem. 36:12-22. Neither argument in the Opposition refutes that 18 Plaintiffs’ California claims against the CB Defendants are untimely.

19 First, Plaintiffs ignore the CB Defendants’ exit in 2018. Plaintiffs instead argue 20 as to all Defendants generally a theory of “continuous violation”: each Plaintiff’s video 21 was reuploaded, disseminated, and monetized after Plaintiffs discovered them; each 22 instance is a violation; and thus, the statutes of limitations did not begin to run on 23 Plaintiffs’ claims until MindGeek removed all content depicting Plaintiffs from 24 MindGeek websites. Opp’n 42:1-43:16. Even if this were true, it does not affect the 25 statutes of limitations as to the CB Defendants. The CB Defendants could not have 26 engaged in a continuous violation after they ceased any association with the MindGeek 27 Borrowers. If the Court were to accept Plaintiffs’ arguments as to the CB Defendants, 28 then the CB Defendants could be liable for all CSAM on MindGeek’s websites from 1 2018 until forever. That is not the law. The statutes of limitations began to run as to 2 the CB Defendants, at the latest, in 2018, and Plaintiffs' claims filed in 2024 are 3 accordingly time-barred. Mot. Mem. 36:12-22 (citing Carroll v. Lee, No. 2:08-cv-975-4 RSL, 2009 WL 2855727, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 31, 2009)); see also Thompson v.

5 City of Monrovia, 186 Cal. App. 4th 860, 879 (2010) (the continuous violation doctrine 6 requires "at least one act [that is part of the proscribed conduct] must occur within the 7 limitations period"); Morton's, 198 F.3d at 837 ("[t]he statute of limitations begins to 8 run upon the conspirator's withdrawal from the conspiracy").

9 Moreover, the continuous violation doctrine would not apply here even if the 10 CB Defendants had not exited in 2018. Plaintiffs confirm this by arguing that "[e]ach 11 instance of MindGeek reuploading and monetizing Plaintiffs' CSAM images is a 12 violation of the applicable statutes and common law." Opp'n 43:7-8. The alleged 13 misconduct is thus "a series of discrete, independently actionable alleged wrongs" that 14 fall outside the continuous violation doctrine's application. Aryeh v. Canon Bus. Sols., 15 Inc., 55 Cal. 4th 1185, 1198 (2013); see also DC Comics v. Pac. Pictures Corp., 938 F.
16 Supp. 2d 941, 950 (C.D. Cal. 2013) (refusing to apply continuous violation doctrine 17 because "[plaintiff]'s harm was not the result of small harms that may not have been 18 actionable on their own," "[r]ather, each was an independently actionable act"). Under 19 their own interpretation of their claims, Plaintiffs could have filed actions once they 20 first learned of the videos, and their alleged harms are not of a type that required 21 accumulation to be actionable. As explained in the Motion, based on when they 22 discovered videos of them had been uploaded to MindGeek's websites, most Plaintiffs' 23 claims were filed after the statutes of limitations periods expired. Mot. Mem. 36:23-24 37:15.

25 Second, Plaintiffs argue that "the statute of limitations for each Plaintiffs' claims 26 has been tolled since February 19, 2019," because that is when the class action 27 complaint was filed in Doe v. MindGeek USA Inc., No. 8:21-cv-338-WLH-ADS (C.D.
28 Cal. Feb. 19, 2021). Opp'n 43:17-44:6. But California's equitable tolling doctrine

1 requires “timely notice to the defendant in the filing of the first claim.” Hatfield v.
2 Halifax PLC, 564 F.3d 1177, 1185 (9th Cir. 2009) (cited favorably by Plaintiffs, Opp’n 3 43:27-44:3). “Tolling extends only to a named defendant in the initial class action, not 4 to different defendants in the subsequent action.” McLaughlin on Class Actions § 3:15.
5 Under California law, “[a] class action against other [defendants] cannot toll the 6 limitations period against [defendants who were not named defendants in the class 7 action].” Haugh v. Depuy-Motech, Inc., 14 F. App’x 883, 886 (9th Cir. 2001). The CB
8 Defendants were never named defendants in Doe v. MindGeek USA Inc., and the case 9 thus cannot toll any claim against them here.

10 In addition, the Ninth Circuit in Hatfield held that tolling benefits are unavailable 11 to non-residents. 564 F.3d at 1189. “[Non-citizens of California] certainly should not 12 be permitted to take advantage of the state’s tolling doctrine.” Id. Thus, all Plaintiffs 13 not alleged to be citizens of California— K.A. (K.A. Compl. ¶ 10), N.L. (N.L. Compl.
14 ¶ 10), L.T. (L.T. Compl. ¶ 10), T.C. (T.C. Compl. ¶ 10), X.N. (X.N. Compl. ¶ 10), N.Y.
15 (N.Y. Compl. ¶ 10), J.C. (J.C. Compl. ¶ 10), C.S. (C.S. Compl. ¶ 10), S.O. (S.O. Compl.
16 ¶ 10), L.S. (L.S. Compl. ¶ 10), W.P. (W.P. Compl. ¶ 10), A.K. (A.K. Compl. ¶ 10)— 17 may not toll their California claims against the CB Defendants.

18 VIII. Section 230 Must Bar All Claims Against the CB Defendants

19 Plaintiffs, in a footnote, argue that the CB Defendants fail to assert a Section 230 20 defense because Plaintiffs’ claims do not treat the CB Defendants as “publishers or 21 speakers” of third-party content. Opp’n 59:27-28 n.47. Plaintiffs refer to the arguments 22 made in the Fleites Opposition, but the cases cited there do not support Plaintiffs’ 23 argument because, among other differences, they do not involve a plaintiff that seeks to 24 hold a lender (CB Defendants) liable for content (videos of Plaintiff) posted by third 25 parties (direct traffickers) on an interactive-computer-service-provider borrower’s 26 (MindGeek) websites. Fleites Opp’n 57:7-16; CB Defs.’ Fleites MTD Reply 20:24-28
27 n.17 (citing cases). Plaintiffs’ claims necessarily treat the MindGeek Entity Defendants 28 as publishers or speakers of third-party content, and it would be an absurd result for the

1 MindGeek Entity Defendants to be immunized under Section 230 and not lenders even 2 though claims against them are asserted based on the same content. See Mot. Mem.
3 40:2-41:4.

4 CONCLUSION

5 For the reasons in the Motion and set forth above, the Court should grant the 6 Motion and dismiss the Complaints against the CB Defendants with prejudice.
